Demands

MUST - SHOULD - NEED TO - HAVE TO

You must

I Should have

I Need to

You shouldn't have

Life must be

Preferences

Prefer - like - nice

I'd prefer it if
It would be nice if I
It would be nice if you

ABC Example

My boss mustn't make any more changes

If she does it will be awful (100% bad)

I can't cope with any more change

It means my boss is thoughtless, selfish and inconsiderate

I'd prefer it if my boss didn't make any more changes

If she does it will be bad, but not the end of the world

It will be hard but I can cope

It means my boss may have other things to consider rather than just me like, instructions from their boss, external pressures etc.

Anxiety & Concern Scales

Unhealthy Anxiety

Healthy Concern

Meta-emotions

Cognitive Behaviour Therapy

CBT Thinking Errors

Also called Cognitive distortions

Irrational and extreme ways of thinking

Personalising

Interpreting events being related to you personally when that is not the case

e.g. It's all my fault that I didn't get the job.

Blaming

Attributing an unfavourable outcome to the fault of somebody e.g. It's his fault that I didn't get the job.

Mind reading

Guessing what someone is thinking and then telling yourself it is true

e.g. I bet he thinks I am an idiot

Making comparisons

Comparing two or more different variables and concluding about one based on the other

e.g. “I’m just not as good as other people at this”

Over-generalising

Creating a general rule from an isolated incident

e.g. Everybody thinks that I am an idiot

Mental filtering

Not noticing the positive events and focusing solely on the negatives.

e.g. despite tidying the house and catching up with a friend in the morning, thinking “Today has been a complete waste of time”

Discounting positives

Noticing the positives but trivialising them e.g. “You’re just saying that to make me feel better”

All or nothing thinking

Because a situation isn't 100% positive, discounting any middle ground, concluding that it is 100% negative

e.g. "I have completely wasted my life on that person"

Emotional reasoning

Assuming emotions are always a good guide, and correct.

e.g. “I’ll be ready to start when I feel like starting” or “I’m not happy here so this is a bad situation”

Labelling

Using derogatory names to describe self and others

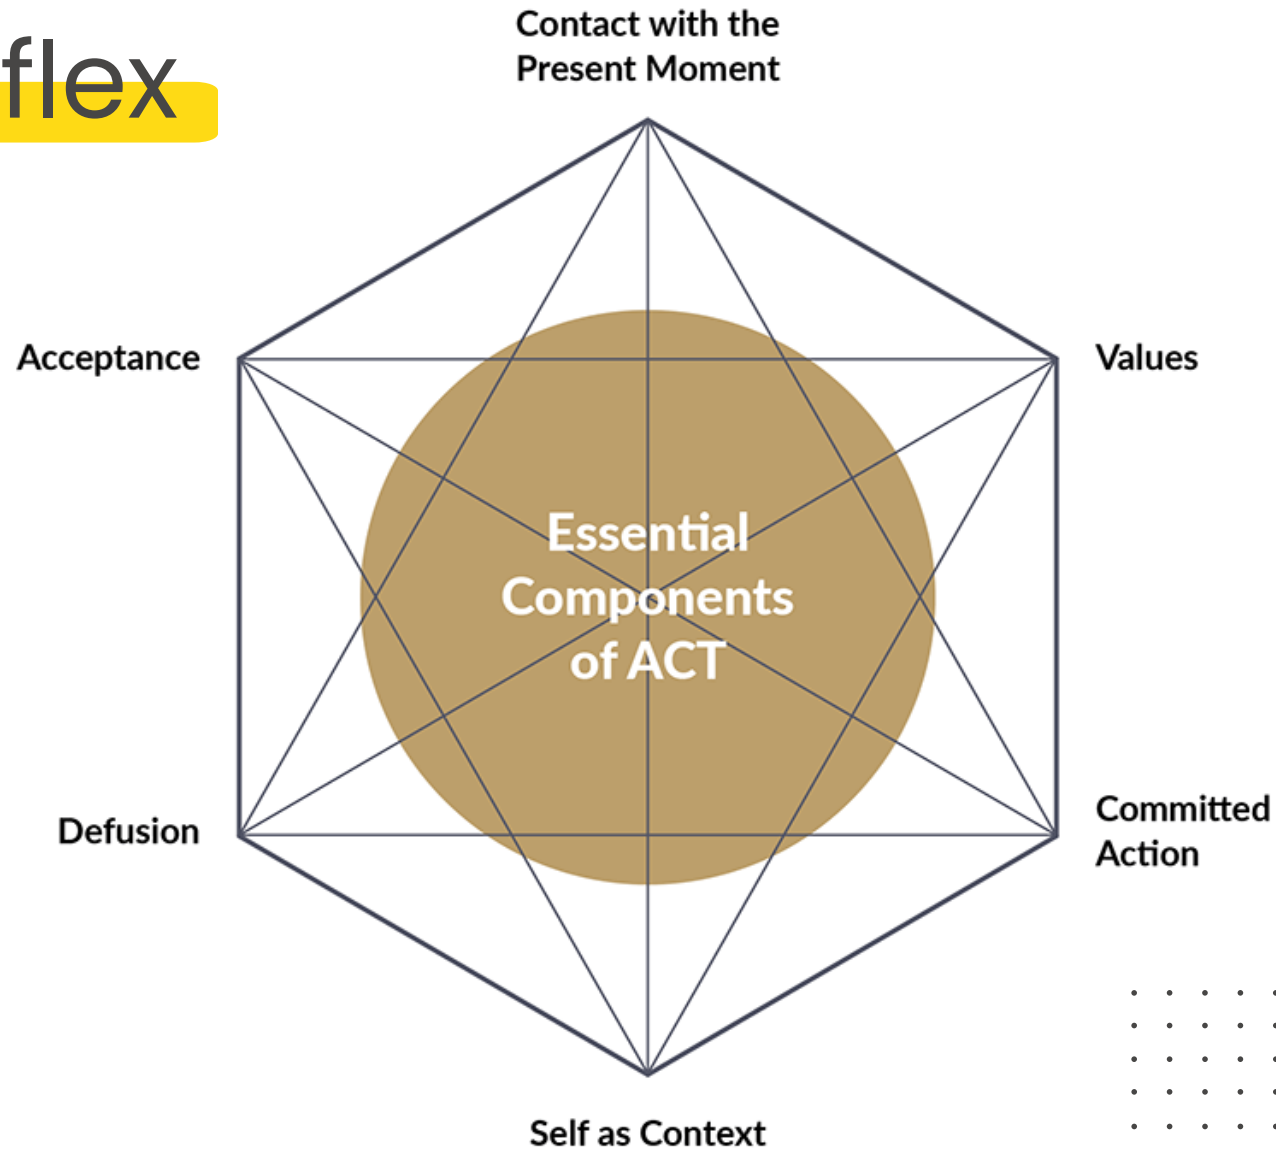

e.g. “I’m a failure”

Meta-emotions

Anger plus ...

... Guilt

"I shouldn't have shouted at my son"

... Anxiety

"I really don't want to get angry again"

... Shame

"I don't want other people to find out I get Angry"

... Depression

"I hate getting angry, but I see no way out"

... Anxiety plus Anger

"I hate myself for this anxiety about getting angry"

...plus Anger

Hurt

"They shouldn't have cheated on me"

Anxiety

"I really don't want to get angry again"

Shame

"He made me feel that way my entire childhood"

Depression

"I hate the way I feel. I hate my life"

Anger

"My neighbour pisses me off every day and I've had enough"

How to be annoyed

1. Accept other people will have their own views and opinions
2. Stand up for what is right, but don't demand everything goes your way
3. Weigh up the pros and cons, and see both sides.
4. Take a moment or two to think
5. Accept – Self, Others, Life
6. Understand that people do things differently / have different opinions
7. Weigh up a problem realistically
8. Think through situations
9. Accept situations and you won't need to ruminate.
10. Reflect on yourself and on situations

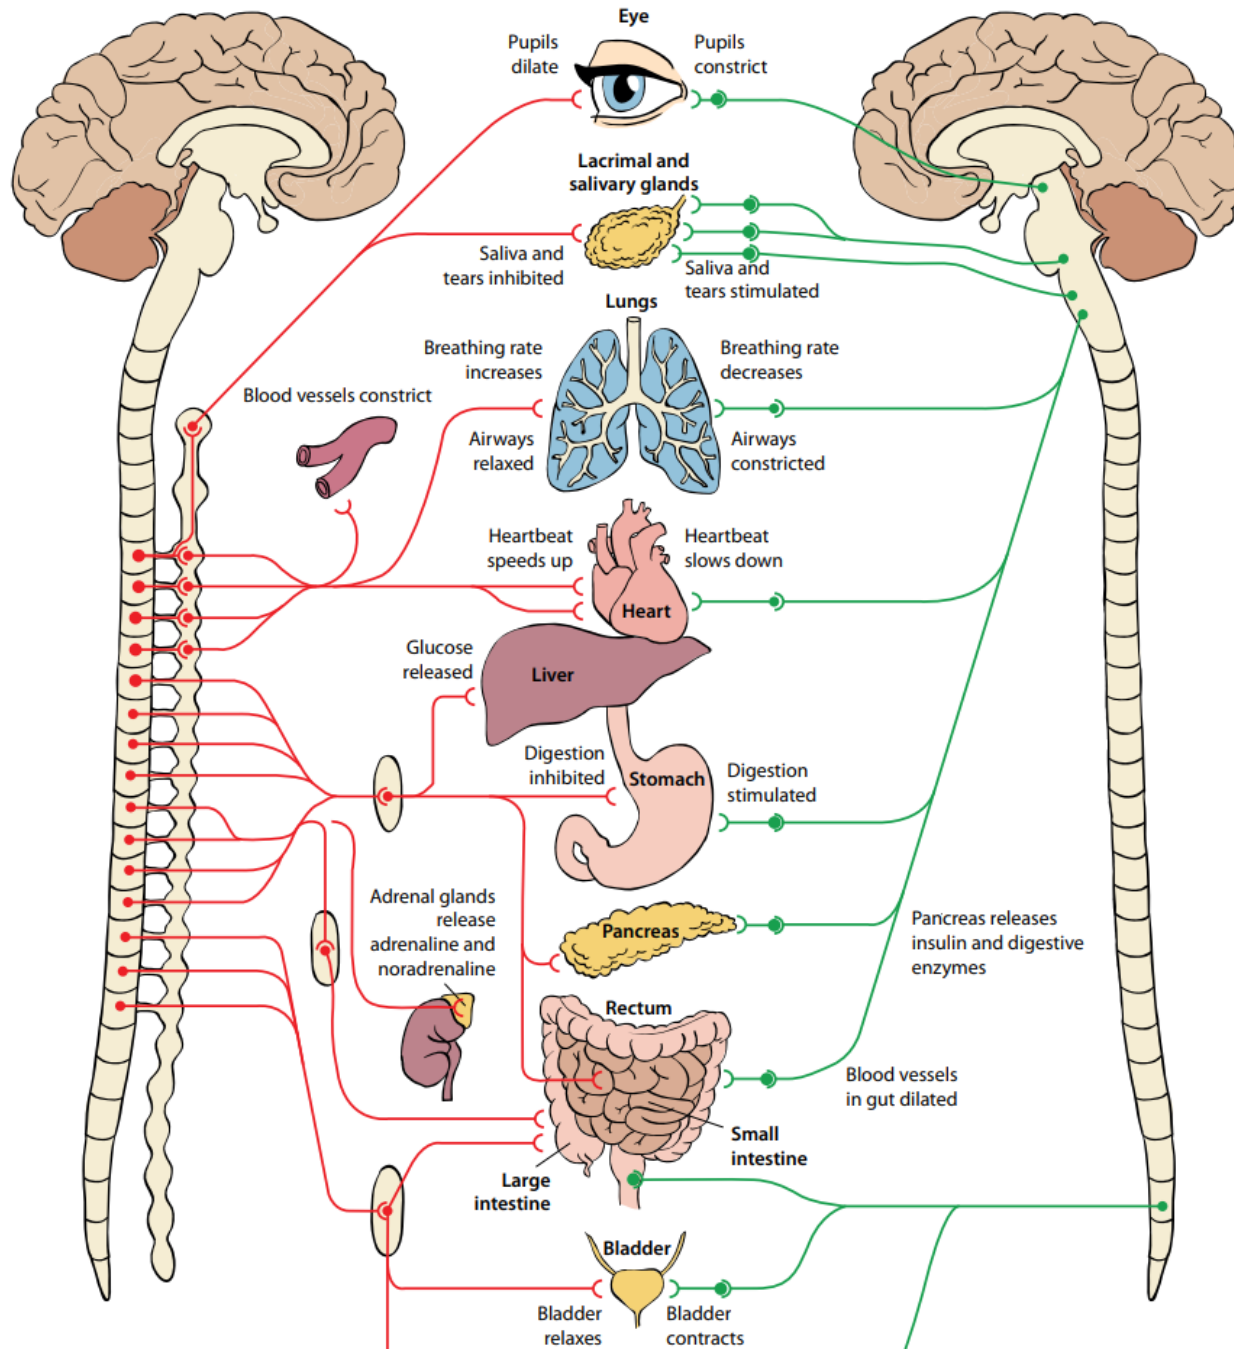

What to do

1. Recognise your anger triggers
2. Recognise anger warning signs/symptoms
3. Ask yourself “What am I demanding”
4. Tell yourself “It’s not the end of the world”
5. Notice that you can cope
6. Take time to evaluate who/what you’re angry about
7. Ask yourself what it means?
8. Self-reflect post event
9. Use top-down / bottom-up approaches

Parasympathetic nervous system

your heart rate variability means

07:42

Today's a piece of cake

Key Insights

You're fairly relaxed and your engine is running smooth as butter. Today is great for taking up a challenge you've been putting off. Presentations, deep thinking and planning, big projects — you can do it all. A workout would do you a lot of good too.

your heart rate variability means

07:45

You're burning the candle at both ends

Key Insights

You're worked up and it's a bit much for you, though you're coping ok. If you stick with a chill flow and don't try to overdo it, you'll shine today. Brain fog might be a problem, so leave serious decision-making for another time. If you're planning to work out, go easy on yourself.

your heart rate variability means

07:47

Ready, set, flow!

Key Insights

You're fairly relaxed and your systems are running like a well-oiled machine. Today is great for taking up a challenge you've been putting off. Presentations, deep thinking and planning, big projects — you can do it all. You're in tip-top shape for a good workout, so hit the gym if you can.

Case Study – Ellis

Ellis is a mum to toddler twins, a boy and a girl. She has ADHD.

Ellis's partner works full time and some extra work evenings and weekends to help pay the bills and pay for trips away. The twins are hard work and Ellis often loses her temper with them.

Ellis is a great mum and provides all the love and care the children need, but hates herself for losing her temper. Because her partner isn't around and the twins take up her time, she rarely sees her friends. When she does she wants to forget about her struggles at home so doesn't talk about it. She has no one to talk to about losing her temper and she feels she is a terrible mum.

What emotions could Ellis be feeling?

A bit about RSD_D

Dr. William Dodson

If a patient does not benefit from medication, they have little control over an episode of RSD once it begins. The incidents have to run their course. Some people with ADHD, however, report that getting interested in something new and fascinating can help to end an RSD episode more quickly than it would otherwise. In my clinical experience, neither coaching nor traditional psychological or behavioural therapies — like CBT or DBT — offer any prevention or relief from impairments.
